Rich's Workflow

- A recurring Outlook task reminds Rich to check out what Portico is doing
- He copies his password from the task
- He clicks on the URL in the reminder and is taken to the Portico audit welcome screen.
- He logs in using his username and pasting in his password
- Takes a look at the dashboard to see how much content there is now, compared to the last time he visited Portico a few months ago.
- He notes a significant increase in journal content.
- He decides to take a look at the reports and selects “Reports and Downloads”
- He then selects “Archive Charts”
- Then “Units Preserved”
- He reviews it for a bit.
- He then checks out how many tools have been developed.
- Finally, he decides to go look at some content – he looked at Wiley content last time and decides to look at Mary Ann Liebert content this visit.
- He selects “Audit by Publisher”
- He selects “Mary Ann Liebert, Inc.”
- He selects DNA and Cell Biology
- He notes that the most recent content ingested was in February.
- He selects 2008
- He picks an article
- He reviews the AU HTML rendition
- He logs out until his next reminder

- What information do you need to know about the Portico holdings?
- At what level of detail?
  - Title committed? Title partially archived? Title completely archived?
  - Volume archived? Issues archived? Article archived?
  - Book archived?
- In what format?
  - Excel? HTML list? XML?
  - A queryable interface? By hand? By machine?
- Is it for use by a person? By a machine?
- Destined for a web page? An ERM? An OPAC? Something else?
- Collection comparisons? By ISSN? By Publisher? Comparisons for books by ISBNs? Must it be exact?
- How should we communicate what is available?
